RE: Comments on Draft Northeast Regional Ocean Plan

Dear Regional Planning Body Co-leads:

We thank you for the opportunity to comment on the Draft Northeast Regional Ocean Plan. As members of the ocean conservation community, we commend the effort the Northeast Regional Planning Body (RPB) has put into this report. The recently released draft Northeast Ocean Plan is the nation's first ocean plan and we are proud of the continued leadership the states and region have displayed. The plan has many elements that will prove beneficial to states, federal agencies, tribes, and ocean users in the Northeast. We are pleased to submit these comments expressing our strong support for the Northeast Regional Ocean Plan, which we believe is a solid first step towards comprehensive, ecosystem-based management of our coastal and marine resources.

First, we commend the RPB on taking this important step towards comprehensive, ecosystem-based management for New England's ocean environment. We believe this plan sets us on a pathway that will help ensure future generations can continue to enjoy our ocean as we do today.

Second, we applaud the Data Portal developed in conjunction with the plan. It serves as a critical guidepost for future decision-making and ensures potential impacts to important marine life are considered and addressed in the decision-making process. Through the plan's narrative and map-based descriptions, we have for the first time a concerted and detailed effort to more fully portray the diversity and abundance of the Northeast ocean ecosystem in a way that managers can easily access and consider. Further, the efforts the Marine Data and Analysis Team (MDAT) undertook to characterize over 150 marine life species through peer review is truly revolutionary, and helps provide a strong foundation for future efforts to more fully characterize the marine ecosystem of the region. We applaud the strong scientific collaboration that occurred throughout the planning process, including the Ecosystem-Based Management workgroup. Involving over 80 scientists in the planning, decision-making and project scoping process is critical to fully portray complex and shifting interactions among marine life and habitat.

We are also pleased to see that the RPB has taken strides to develop a framework for identifying important ecological areas (IEA). The MDAT team laid a strong foundation for this process, and we are excited to see that together, you are working towards identifying important marine habitats and areas of critical biodiversity for the region. We encourage the RPB to strengthen the plan by identifying a more concrete work plan and timeline for finalizing the IEA framework and identification. This process should be done in an open, inclusive, and transparent manner driven by the best available data and leadership from the scientific community. As with other products produced from the MDAT team, we strongly encourage all products to be available for public review, and for them to undergo a rigorous peer-review process from the scientific community.

The ability to maintain and update the data portal, and all the critical information it provides, is vital to the long term success of the ocean plan. We strongly urge the RPB to identify sustainable funding and leadership solutions that will ensure the portal remains a keystone of ocean decision-making for the northeast long into the future.

Third, we commend the RPB and member agencies on their commitments to consider the maps and data in the plan as part of their environmental and regulatory review processes. As projects are considered in the region, these commitments ensure that stakeholders who cannot speak for themselves—namely marine life and associated habitat—are brought into the room early and considered equally when decisions are being made. These commitments are critical to more fully and effectively conserving our ocean ecosystem, and we are excited to see this as a keystone of the plan and look forward to future advances in the marine life data.

Fourth, while the RPB and ocean plan provide a better mechanism for stakeholder engagement than before this process began, we strongly urge the RPB to continue to strengthen stakeholder engagement by developing specific mechanisms where stakeholders can be involved early in the decision-making processes. It is our belief that transparent discussions about stakeholder needs and the needs of the marine environment make for better long-term management decisions. The stakeholder engagement and consideration of marine ecosystems outlined in the ocean plan are a major step in the right direction, and must continue. Early stakeholder engagement is critical to ensuring a healthy and sustainable ocean ecosystem is maintained, and our resources remain viable for future generations to enjoy.

Finally, we are pleased to see strong science and research priorities in the final chapter of the plan, especially priorities focused on advancing our understanding of the current and future ocean environment. By identifying the need for new surveys to fill data gaps on the spatial and temporal distribution of marine life and pelagic habitats as well as seafloor mapping products and species-habitat relationships, we will further advance the knowledge and understanding of our ecosystem, and ensure it is properly considered when decisions are being made. The RPB also rightfully identified the critical need to characterize the changing nature of our marine ecosystem in the face of climate change, and we are extremely pleased to see this as a top research priority for the region. Finally, as the region works towards a comprehensive ecosystem-based management approach, we applaud it for identifying the need to study cumulative impacts and ecosystem services. The dynamic nature of our ocean ecosystem necessitates this holistic view, and by focusing research priorities here, we can more quickly work to a sustainable model for both our ocean and vibrant New England economy. We urge the RPB work to prioritize filling these data gaps, and to work quickly to direct the necessary funding to support these endeavors.

Thank you again for the opportunity to provide comments on the Northeast Regional Ocean Plan. The Plan represents important progress in ocean management and the larger ocean community's efforts to plan for ocean uses in a smarter, more fully informed way. We are pleased to offer our full support for this work, and urge your continued leadership in ocean planning.

Sincerely the following 9,162 Ocean Conservancy supporters,
